8.10 The One With Monica's Boots

Monica spends a fortune on (v. 花了一大笔钱) a pair of boots;

She decides to keep them, over Chandler's objections (n. 异议).

But the longer she wears them, the more pain she's in.

Joey's sister Dina wants to talk to Rachel — supposedly about the fashion industry — but it turns out she's pregnant and actually wants advice on how to handle being a single mom.

Phoebe finds out that Ben goes to the same private school as Sting's son.

She poses as Susan and tries to use Ben to get tickets to Sting's concert.

[Scene: Monica and Chandler's, Monica is trying on a pair of new boots as Chandler enters.]

Monica: Hey! So what do you think?

Chandler: New haircut? (Monica nods—No. —) Necklace? (No) Dress? (No) Boots? (Monica nods —Yes. —) Boots!

Chandler: Yeah well, too bad we're gonna have to return them.

Rachel: Return them?! Shh! They're gonna hear you!

Monica: Honey, I'm not returning them. Okay? I mean I-I know they cost a lot, but I'm going to wear them all the time. You'll see. Besides, I love the compliments. I mean, have you ever had something so beautiful everyone wanted it?

Chandler: I have you.

Phoebe: You knew this and you never said anything?! With all the stupid dinosaur stuff you tell us?!

Ross: Fine! No more dinosaur stuff! Can I talk about fossils? (Joey is about to sit down and hears this so instead he groans and exits.)

Founded by Milton Glaser and Clay Felker in 1968 as a competitor to The New Yorker, it offers less national news and more gossip, but has also published noteworthy(adj. 值得注目的) articles on city and state politics and culture over the years. Its format and style have been copied by other American regional city publications, such as Philadelphia Magazine, New Jersey Monthly and others, although New York is the only weekly among them and therefore contains more immediate coverage. Its 2005 paid circulation is 437,181, with 94.6% of that coming from subscriptions(n. 订阅). The website receives visits from 1.1 million users monthly.

Ross: Uh, I actually haven't even met him.
